

Arvind Agrawal, founder and CEO of AICL, has worked for over six years with more than 120 companies in giving shape to, and executing, their communication strategies. A Chartered Accountant and Company Secretary, he worked first as a journalist with one of India's oldest English Dailies, and then as a CFO with a steel fabrication company before venturing into this field in a bid to marry the two skills he acquired – communicating to a large audience and understanding the dynamics of businesses. He was selected as one of eight finalists and won the runner-up position for the nationwide British Council Young Communications Entrepreneur Award for 2009. Today, he is one of India's most experienced campaigners of investor communication strategies for companies.